

SEA LABS: Scientists are creating a network of observatories designed to study activity under the ocean. Above are existing and planned observatories including the US-Canadian Neptune project, which relies on buoys, sensors, and underwater vehicles.